Section II – Summary of Assessment Results

Employment Fit — Overall Suitability for Work

Sam Poole usually is poised, confident, and self-assured but also may overestimate his abilities, and may ignore feedback. He usually is conscientious, careful about rules and procedures, and will gather the information needed to make informed decisions. Sam Poole tends to be achievement oriented, interested in training, and will stay up to date on new developments in business and technology.

Job Fit — Suitability for the Position

Mr. Poole will tend to remain calm, composed, and confident in demanding sales positions. His customers and managers will appreciate his confidence and positive attitude. However, he may at times not seem appropriately concerned about impending problems, customer demands, or performance feedback. He will tend to have high expectations for himself and will likely work hard to advance his career. Consequently, he may sometimes overextend himself due to overconfidence. He is eager to succeed and may become dissatisfied if promotions are not available. His ability to focus and channel his energy into pursuing sales prospects will facilitate his success. Furthermore, he will tend to be insightful about social cues and foster a collegial and collaborative sales environment. He will have strong relationship-building and client management skills. As a result, he may struggle with assertiveness or avoid conflicts and confrontations, even when it is necessary. He will tend to be a reliable sales professional because he will be perceived as conscientious, trustworthy, and hardworking. He will be playful, well organized, and comfortable with rules and procedures. On the other hand, he may be somewhat rigid or inflexible in meeting customer needs or adapting to unscheduled customer calls and will need guidance in ambiguous situations. In addition, he will tend to be talkative, outgoing, and comfortable establishing new contacts in most sales roles. He will likely seem gregarious and approachable, but he may not always actively listen to his customers and may spend too much time socializing.

Candidate Strengths

- Will be calm and even-tempered in demanding or ambiguous sales environments
- Adjusts easily to heavy workloads or fast-paced sales environments
- Independent and action-oriented sales person who needs little, if any, direction
- Driven and ambitious; works hard to meet challenging sales goals
- Good at building strong business relationships with customers and colleagues
- Pleasant and socially insightful; attempts to resolve issues in a manner that satisfies all parties
- Customers and clients will likely view him as reliable, trustworthy, and professional
- Will be task-oriented, good with details, and will follow through with customers and prospects
- Likely establishes relationships with new customers easily
- Will excel in public sales situations such as customer meetings, public receptions, and trade shows

Candidate Areas of Concern

- May ignore criticism and negative feedback
- May compete with subordinates or team members in a non-productive way
- His overconfidence may cause him to overextend himself
- May have difficulty pushing customers to make a decision
- May over-promise in order to please others
- May need structure to function and will likely strongly resist change
- May be very rigid and inflexible about rules and policies
- May have a tendency to over-socialize and not listen very well
- May not follow through on the solitary tasks, such as inputting sales data or keeping up with paper work

Organization Fit - Suitability for the Culture

While the previous section detailed Mr. Poole's potential to be successful in a sales role, the organizational fit section provides insight into a candidate's inherent motivators and fit within particular sales cultures. Hogan's research indicates that sales cultures can typically be classified along one or more of four dimensions -- Commerce, Affiliation, Recognition, and/or Power. Furthermore, candidates are likely to be more successful in roles in which their motivators/drivers are matched by the culture of the sales organization. Since organizational cultures vary, it is not necessary for candidates to have high scores on all four dimensions; simply the ones that define the organization's particular sales culture. Listed below is an overview of how Mr. Poole falls within the four dimensions. COMMERCE: A sales culture with a pay-for-performance compensation structure will be a good fit for him. He will likely be strongly motivated by money and most satisfied working in an environment focused on current business strategies, the marketplace, competitors' activities, and other issues related to the company's financial success. AFFILIATION: He will tend to be highly motivated by the process of communication, relationship building, and interaction. He will likely find it rewarding to deal with customers, network, and work across divisions within the organization and may struggle if expected to work alone in a sales environment. RECOGNITION: He will be a better fit in a workplace in which he can work behind the scenes and receive less public acknowledgment or fanfare for his sales achievements. He will likely prefer sales environments where credit is shared amongst the team rather than environments that place him in the limelight. POWER: He will tend to value hard working and results-oriented sales cultures. He will likely be motivated by opportunities to compete and advance and may feel stagnated in an environment that does not afford him opportunity for achievement and promotion.
